Verifone to Vendor and holds those funds in Verifone’s Consumer Funds Account on Vendor’s behalf and transmits / settles such payments further to the Vendor subscribing to the Payment Terminal Service. The Payment Terminal Service offered by Verifone at any given time and its functional principle are described in detail on the Verifone website.

2.6 “International Card Providers” include all enterprises belonging to the same group of companies as Visa International Ltd or MasterCard Incorporated Ltd, or other international card providers.

2.7 “Online Payment Service” is the Payment Service offered by Verifone at any given time and the functional principle whereby Verifone, on behalf of Vendor, receives payments resulting from payment transactions initiated by Consumers online and holds those funds in Verifone’s Consumer Funds Account on Vendor’s behalf and transmits / settles such payments further to the Vendor subscribing to the Payment Terminal Service. The Online Payment Service offered by Verifone at any given time and its functional principle are described in detail on the Verifone website.

3. Functional principle of Payment Service

3.1 Verifone shall enter into agreements with various Means of Payment Providers, pursuant to which Verifone is able to offer Vendor a Payment Service pursuant to the Service Agreement. In the Payment Service, payments are transmitted from Consumers’ bank accounts or card accounts with a credit card company, or from invoicing operators, to the Verifone Consumer Funds Account courtesy of Means of Payment Providers, and further from Verifone to Vendor’s bank account.

3.2 When subscribing to the Payment Terminal Service, Vendor shall have acquired from Verifone a Payment Terminal device on a separate agreement for Consumers to make payments. Once Consumer has selected a method of payment on the Payment Terminal, Consumer shall enter on the Payment Terminal the details required by the Means of Payment Provider for completing the payment transaction. Verifying Consumer’s identity may be required in the case of certain methods of payment and certain circumstances of payment. The payment recipient in the aforementioned payment transactions is Verifone. The payments are paid into the Verifone Consumer Funds Account.

3.3 In the Online Payment Service, Verifone shall provide Vendor with a Vendor-specific online payment form to which Vendor shall guide Consumer in Vendor’s online shop. Once Consumer has selected a method of payment on the Verifone Online Payment Service payment form, Consumer is forwarded to the subpage for that method of payment to enter the details required by the Means of Payment Provider for completing the payment transaction. Forwarding Consumer to the Means of Payment Provider’s service, for instance for the purpose of verifying Consumer’s identity, may be required in the case of certain methods of payment and certain circumstances of payment. In such cases, Consumer is automatically returned to the Online Payment Service once the required function has been performed. 3.5 Said payment, less the commission specified in section 9.1, shall be settled to Vendor on the basis of information supplied by Vendor. The settlement period shall be defined in the Verifone Tariff valid at any given time. In the circumstances described below, Verifone shall have the right to suspend or deny payment transmission in part or in full or to extend the settlement period.

3.6 Individual payment transactions initiated by individual Consumers received through a Means of Payment Provider shall not be settled to Vendor individually. Instead, Verifone payments to Vendor shall be made as single payments within an agreed settlement period, each single payment to include all payment transactions received by Verifone on behalf of Vendor during one banking day.

3.7 No interest shall be paid on the funds in the Consumer Funds Account.

4. Methods of payment offered by Means of Payment Providers

4.1 Vendor may select for the Payment Service one or more methods of payment from among those granted to Verifone by Means of Payment Providers at any given time. Vendor may add or remove methods of payment with notifying Verifone of same.

4.2 Adding a method of payment requires Vendor to accept that either Verifone or the Means of payment provider takes the right to check that method of payment funds are sufficient to cover such payments. Verifone reserves the right of suspension or denial of services if funds are insufficient.
5. Vendor details

5.1 Vendor shall supply Verifone with the details required by Verifone concerning Vendor’s corporate form, ownership (including details on the shareholders of the group of companies if any or on Vendor’s direct or indirect parent company), the nature of Vendor’s operations, Vendor’s corporate officers and other Vendor details on the agreement form and, as necessary, in response to any further queries or requests for explanation from Verifone.

Said details shall always be submitted through the electronic system designated by Verifone. Vendor shall immediately update any changes in the aforementioned details in said system.

Such changes include, but are not limited to, changes in Vendor’s ownership structure or management, and assignment of the business or its assets.

5.3 Verifone shall have the right to verify the details supplied by Vendor using publicly available sources and consulting the databases of authorities and bodies maintaining consumer data, such as the Population Register Centre, credit information companies and/or the Finnish Patent and Registration Office.

5.4 Vendor shall consent that Verifone may disclose any and all details supplied by Vendor and any details concerning Vendor otherwise obtained to the Means of Payment Providers, to other service providers involved in the implementation of the Payment Service, and to the authorities.

5.5 Vendor shall be responsible for ensuring that the details supplied by Vendor to Verifone are correct and up to date.

Vendor shall be held responsible to Verifone for fulfilling his contractual obligations to Consumer correctly and in full in accordance with Vendor’s offer and terms of agreement and Consumer’s order. Verifone shall also not be considered a party in any circumstance involving the warranty, other liability for material defects or return of a product or service received by Consumer, nor shall Verifone be held liable for costs arising from same.

7.4 Verifone shall not be held responsible in any way for the features, functions, errors, delays or non-delivery of any product or service provided pursuant to an agreement between Vendor and Consumer. Vendor shall indemnify Verifone in full against any and all claims made by Consumer and against any and all compensations and restitutions payable to Consumer in circumstances described below in these Vendor Terms in case of an error, delay or other breach of agreement on the part of Vendor. Vendor shall also indemnify Verifone against any other circumstance where Consumer, because of a breach of agreement, legislation applying to consumer protection or to trade or remote sales in other respects, the Means of Payment Provider’s terms and conditions of agreement and contractual practices, or any other reason that is not manifestly unfounded, shall be entitled to be refunded in part or full a payment.

7.5 Vendor shall not have the right to process a payment transaction until the related product or service has been delivered or such delivery is assured.

7.6 Verifone shall not be held liable for any criminal action of Consumer nor for any breach of agreement of Consumer in respect of Vendor in any way. If Verifone incurs any costs or compensation payable due to a breach of agreement on the part of Consumer, Vendor shall undertake if required to reimburse Verifone for the amount of such costs or compensation plus two (2) percent of the amount and annual penalty interest as per the Interest Act.

7.7 If Consumer disputes an alleged payment transaction and the payment transaction is proven to be false or incorrect, Verifone shall refund to Consumer the funds received from Consumer, and Vendor shall be liable to reimburse Verifone for said refund. If Verifone is obligated (a) by decision of the consumer protection authorities or a court of law to pay fees or compensations the basis for which is an action by Vendor or an error or delay in a product or service delivered by Vendor, or (b) by demand of a Means of Payment Provider in accordance with the terms of the means of payment agreement applied at any given time by the Means of Payment Provider, to refund a payment or to reimburse Consumer, either directly or through the Means of Payment Provider: then Vendor shall undertake on demand to reimburse Verifone for the amount of any such payment or compensation plus two (2) percent of the amount and annual penalty interest as per the Interest Act.

7.8 If Consumer refuses to accept or does not collect a product or service referred to in chapter 6 section 16 of the Consumer Protection Act, Verifone may refrain from refunding Consumer’s funds in respect of same, provided that Vendor has presented Verifone with a reliable account of why said product or service is not covered by the right of cancellation under the Consumer Protection Act.

7.10 If Consumer is not a private consumer and refuses to accept or does not collect a product ordered from Vendor, Verifone shall refund the funds received from Consumer, either directly or through the Means of Payment Provider, after Vendor has notified Verifone of such refusal or non-collection, or at the very latest when Consumer presents a claim for a refund.

7.11 If Vendor does not deliver a product or service ordered by Consumer from Vendor within the time limit agreed by Vendor and Consumer, Verifone shall refund the funds received from Consumer in full, either directly or through the Means of Payment provider. Said refund shall be made when Verifone has received Consumer’s demand to that effect, unless Vendor immediately presents a reliable account of the product or service having been appropriately delivered or an acceptable justification for the product or service not having been delivered. Vendor shall be held liable for any penalty interest payable on said refund.

7.12 The transport or other delivery of Vendor’s product or service to Consumer shall be managed directly between Vendor and Consumer, and Verifone shall not be independently or indirectly held liable to either of the aforementioned parties for any delivery, the time period for the delivery, failure to make the delivery or any damage that may be caused in connection with transport and delivery.

7.13 Vendor shall ensure that each Consumer has the opportunity to submit any and all remarks, complaints and claims concerning Vendor’s operations, products and services directly to Vendor and that such remarks, complaints and claims are processed without delay and appropriately. Vendor shall make his contact details available to Consumer in Vendor’s service for the purpose of submitting any remarks, complaints or claims.

7.14 Vendor shall commit to providing and marketing the products and services that are provided by Vendor and for which the Payment Service is used in accordance with legislation, official orders and good business practice.

7.15 If Vendor subscribes to the Online Payment Service, Vendor shall ensure in his marketing that users will not confuse Vendor’s online service and Verifone’s Online Payment Service, and the related responsibilities, with one another. Vendor shall send an order confirmation to Consumer for each order, electronically or in writing, and/or offer Consumer the opportunity to view his order online.
Vendor shall deliver to Verifone on request an order confirmation or similar document for each order within two business days. This section 7.15 shall not apply to the Payment Terminal Service.

Such a charge must be justifiable and may not exceed the actual costs incurred by Vendor by the use of the method of payment in question. With regard to such charges, Vendor shall undertake to comply with legislation and official orders.

8.2 In case of a refund, Vendor shall only commit to refunding a payment to the same card number that was used in the payment transaction being refunded.
